National Weekly Gives View of Robinson Jeffers Home Life

(From Time, April 4)

EYRIE. Hard by the Pacific surf-line at Carmel, California stands a tower of grey Santa Lucia granite, sea-worn boulders rolled up from the shore and heaved into place by Poet Jeffers for his own perch. For several years the stones rose in their courses; as they began to invade the upper air, a hawk dropped down to haunt them. Now Hawk Tower stands 30 feet high; in its turreted top is a socket to hold a flag pole to flaunt a flag, though neither hawks nor Poet Jeffers favor flapping flags.

The building of the tower was urged by Poet Jeffers' wife, who thought the exercise would be good for her husband. The building has proved useful to the whole family, who have there their "silent rooms." To its two-room base, Garth Sherwood and Donnan Call, the Jeffers' twin sons, resort in rainy weather. On the floor above, Mrs. Jeffers, who is devoted to music, Irish folk-songs in particular, has installed a small organ. Poet Jeffers, to whom all music is "just noise," occupies, with a table and a chair, the tiny room above. Here in the-mornings, when his slow pulse beats only 40 times a minute, he slowly writes his poems; in the afternoons, when his pulse speeds up to 60, he plants trees, rolls stones.

The family eat and sleep in the house nearby, built also of sea boulders, but shaped after an old Tudor barn in Surrey which Mrs. Jeffers once admired. In the one-room attic the family sleep; downstairs they live their quiet life. They have no telephone, no electric lights, no servants, but they entertain a few friends now and then. Poet Jeffers chose the bed down-stairs by the sea-window for a good death-bed . . . when the patient daemon behind the screen of sea-rock and sky thumps with his staff, and call thrice; "Come Jeffers."

Poet Jeffers, though gentle (he has never killed an animal) is not shy; though not shy he is not sociable, seeks neither the companionship of old friends nor acquaintanceship with new. Towards local Californians, as toward the human species as a whole, he is reserved, cold.

$300 in Loot Taken in Daring Burglary

Loot valued at more than $300, including a diamond ring, was taken in a daring burglary early yesterday morning at the home of Mrs. Amy Claire Bingham, 10th and Lincoln streets.

The burglar broke into the home while Mrs. Bingham and her husband were sound asleep. As he was leaving, Mrs. Bingham suddenly awakened and saw the figure standing near the bed. She reached for a flashlight underneath her pillow and threw it at the burglar. The burglar ducked and managed to escape before she could obtain a good description of him.

"Missing" Woman Is Found Safe at Home

Mrs. Lauretta A. Payne, east bay club woman, for whom a state-wide hunt was made following the report that she was missing from the cottage she had rented in Carmel, was found safe at her home in Oakland, according to word received here.

Mrs. Payne, who came to Carmel to rest, following an automobile accident in which she was injured, was believed by neighbors to have disappeared. Because of her nervous condition, authorities were asked to search for her.

Chimney Fire Put Out On Junipero Cottage

Quick work on the part of the Carmel fire department prevented flames from spreading at a small chimney blaze this week at Ben Wetzel's cottage on Junipero and Eighth.

The fire is believed to have been caused by sparks coming from the chimney and landing on the roof. A large hole was burned in the center of the roof before the fire was finally extinguished.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Marble Gale are returning to Carmel from a several months' stay in Belmont, Massachusetts, and in other Eastern cities.

Heavy Vote Puts Catlin, Norton on Board as Mrs. Rockwell Loses

Two new faces will be on the city council when they meet again next month. They are John Catlin, who received the highest vote ever cast for city councilman and Robert Norton, both elected last Monday.

Catlin received 328 votes while Norton polled 284. Mrs. Jessamine Rockwell, who was seeking re-election was close behind with 272 votes while C. W. Whitney, drew only 261 votes. Despite the fact that there was no particular issue to be fought out at the polls, more than 600 votes were cast.

Barney Segal, was returned city treasurer with 448 votes. He was unopposed as was City Clerk Saidee Van Brower who obtained 492 votes, the highest any of the candidates received.

The election upset the political pot that had been brewing for weeks. From the very first, Mrs. Rockwell had been assured support. Her vote last week on the construction of tennis courts on the sand dunes is believed to have swung Norton into office.

A survey over the field of battle revealed the salient fact that many of the most enthusiastic supporters of Mrs. Rockwell and Whitney had not registered in time to cast their ballots. Many of them were turned away from the polls. Also, a large group who were behind these two candidates lived outside the city limits and consequently could not vote.

The election of Catlin and Norton was greeted with approval in practically all sections of the village, after news of the results had spread around. Catlin has been a resident of Carmel for more than ten years and before that time frequently paid monthly visits to the village. He was formerly a well known attorney in San Francisco and gave up his practice there to open up "The Forge in the Forest," in Carmel.

Norton has been a resident of Carmel for 29 years—in fact he was born on the peninsula. He has been in the real estate business for many years and has seen the town grow from a village of only a few houses to a city of world renown.

Both Catlin and Norton were elected on platforms of economy and on the understanding that no street program would be put through at the present time. Catlin, since the last time he ran for the city council, has been preaching "Carmel should be left alone, there is no need for improvements."

Catlin and Norton will occupy the places of Mrs. Rockwell and Ross Bonham, as the latter did not seek re-election. They will be installed in office on May 4, the next regular meeting of the city council.

The other three members of the board, Mayor Herbert Heron, John B. Jordan and Clara Kellogg have two more years in office.

It is to be hoped that the present financial depression has in no way diminished anyone's interest in and love for dumb animals and birds. This is a reminder that next Sunday inaugurates "Be Kind to Animals Week." Do some kindness to a dumb animal. Feed them, water them, treat their wounds, or, perhaps better still, give some abandoned cat or dog a good future home.

Political Tongues Start to Wag on Who Becomes Next Mayor

Will Herbert Heron continue indicated that he would probably as mayor for another two years, be the village's next mayor. or will his robe of high office be turned over to John Catlin, the newly elected councilman?

This was the salient question facing Carmel this week, following the results of the city election last Monday when Catlin and Robert Norton were named to the city council. By virtue of the heavy vote Catlin received, it was

It has been customary in the past that the robes of mayoralty go to the councilman receiving the highest vote at an election. Two years ago when Heron was named to the council he was the highest man with 325 votes.

Had Mrs. Rockwell been re-elected, there would have been but little doubt that Heron would have continued as mayor. With the two new faces on the council, however, it is common talk on the curb streets today that Catlin will slip into Heron's shoes.

The final decision is in the hands of the members of the council themselves. If Clara Kellogg, and John Jordan voted for Heron and Heron voted for himself, he would have the necessary majority to keep him in the chair. On the other hand, if Norton vote for Catlin, and the latter also votes for himself, Catlin would go into office as mayor.

Then there is also a rumor that Jordan has aspirations to be mayor again. These aspirations, however, are denied by him, although it is understood that he would not reject the mayoralty robes if they were handed over to him.

At any rate, Heron isn't worrying very much. After all, if he does go out as mayor, he can always return to writing poetry.

And, anyway, there's more money in poetry than in being mayor of Carmel.

Dr. Kocher to Attend Convention in East

In order to attend the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, Dr. R. A. Kocher of the Grace Deere Velie clinic, left Carmel last Tuesday for Philadelphia. While at the convention Dr. Kocher will read a paper before the American Society of Biologists on the subject of his researches in the field of Metabolism.

Enroute, Dr. Kocher has been invited to address the New York Academy of Medicine in New York City, his subject being "The conclusions drawn on chronic ulcerative celitis from the clinical and laboratory findings at the Grace Deere Velie clinic."

World Famed Artists To Produce And Act in Forest Theatre Play

If plans now maturing in the board of trustees of the Forest Theater Society do not go amiss, the main summer play at Carmel's open-air playhouse will be Stephen Phillips' poetic tragedy of Italy in the thirteenth century, "Paola and Francesca," with Helen Ware and Frederic Burt its producers, and both taking parts in the cast.

This important announcement is the result of the first spring meeting of the Forest Theater board, held last Tuesday night at the home of the Henry Dickinsons on the Point. The date of the main summer play was set for the nights of July 1, 2, and 3. A second play, not yet selected, will be given the first week in August.

Helen Ware, who is Mrs. Frederic Burt, and lives on Camino Real and Fourth street in Carmel, retired from the professional stage as one of its leading Broadway stars. Mr. Burt, himself an actor of renown, is a producer of plays for the stage and films. Both are qualified to give Carmel the finest Forest Theater production in its history, and their interest in doing so should be appreciated by all lovers of the drama, and of the open-air playhouse in the forest.

A campaign to increase the membership of the Forest Theater Society will be started in a week and it is expected that interest in the program will result in the largest and most active organization in many years.

The matter of tennis courts on the theatre grounds, back of the stage, was considered but no decision has as yet been reached.

Want a Laugh? See Benefit Show Presented a Week From Tonight

When the stage manager presses the bell for "Curtain" next Friday night at the Sunset School Auditorium, the opening night of the unemployment benefit, eight hundred people will start a two-hour laughing rampage. Lita Bathen and her cohorts are now in the midst of the last minute preparations which bid fair to result in the most varied, sparkling and entertaining program which Carmel residents have seen, heard or laughed at for a long time.

Of course the great surprise on the program is the burlesque, wittily called, "Carmel Lights." It is a little cross-section of Carmel life representing fifteen minutes at the local postoffice—the last fifteen minutes before the afternoon mail closes. Prominent writers, artists, real estaters, mayor and councilmen are to be burlesqued with costume, makeup, and dialogue. There is a thread of plot, and for atmosphere there are pajama-clad flappers, dogs, real estate promoters, nice temperamental old ladies and retired elderly gents. The mixups they all get into will cause much hilarity and are guaranteed as a cure for hoarding, depression and nervous prostration. This act is in three scenes—one in front of the postoffice, one inside and one in the council chamber.

There will be some professional dancers to furnish an act, and some skits from local people. Galt Bell will produce a very clever sketch entitled "The Still Alarm" a part of the New York Little Show.

And—the very moving and dramatic play, "Sabotage," directed by Frederick Burt and played by the following cast: Helen Ware Madam Rose; Tom Fisher as Pier as Angele; Gertrude Bardarson as Madam Rose; Robert Parrott as Dr. Vidal and Tom Fisher as Pierre.

Artists Spray War Paint to Stop Tennis Courts Going on Dunes

A strong artistic wind this week threw sand into the eyes of the commercial element of the village and left them stranded helplessly in the dark.

As the result of the victory on the part of the artists, the world famous sand dunes north of Ocean avenue will not be marred by the construction of tennis courts or any other recreational feature. This was definitely understood when the council at a special meeting Monday morning rescinded a previous resolution which had appropriated $481 for that purpose and had granted permission for the construction.

The special meeting was called by Mayor Herbert Heron when William Silva, noted painter, and several other Carmel artists threatened to obtain an injunction against the city for allowing the construction of the proposed courts on the sand dunes. Silva's ire was aroused when he found that several trees had already been cut to make room for the tennis courts.

Permission to construct the tennis courts was asked in a letter sent to the council last week and signed by C. R. Parrott and Tom Phillips who requested the court on behalf of the employment commission and asked that $962 be appropriated for the purpose.

The council rejected this request but explained that if half that amount could be obtained by public subscription, the city would match dollar for dollar up to $481. This was agreed upon by Parrott and the resolution was passed by the council.

However, when Silva and a group of prominent Carmel residents heard of the proposed plan, they immediately asked Mayor Heron to call a special meeting to re-consider the action.

At the meeting, Silva told the council that they would have protested against such a plan before, but it had not been brought to their attention. He said:

"It was not until I read about it in the Pine Cone that I learned of the plan. I at once objected to it as being a destructive move to spoil the beauty of the sand dunes. There are thousands of tennis courts in all parts of the world, but there are no sand dunes to equal the beauty of ours. This movement is being sponsored by the same people who would like to see the streets paved from curb to curb and who would want Carmel to become a standardized beach town. If they want a beach

The play has a French locale, dunes, but felt that inasmuch as the council withdrew the resolution representing any poor man's home and the thought running through the play is said to be very pertinent to the present day.

Probably one of the most enjoyable features of the show will be the dance to be held during the intermission and at the close of the play with a smashing fine orchestra to furnish the music. And coffee and sinkers and cookies and cakes for those as has the ten cents to buy 'em.

Tickets can be secured from the committee or from the Denny Watrous Gallery and seats may be reserved at the latter place. Price of the tickets are One Dollar. No extra charge for reserved seats.

the majority seemed to want them, he favored the plan. It developed, however, during the meeting that the majority was really a minority. At the end of the discussion, time in the future.

Get Out the Old Broom! Village Makes Plans for Clean-up Drive

Horrors! Carmel is about to become a clean city.

This time, however, it will not be the police or the official censorship committee, who are contemplating wiping the face of the village.

Instead, it will be the garbage man, working under the direction of the Carmel fire department. And what a cleaning the city is about to get!

Stray boxes in front of shops will go the way of all flesh; the floor of the postoffice will be vacuumed; the gathering of ginger ale bottles that has been thrown out of windows will be picked up and sold for home brew purposes; manuscripts over which whole months have been spent but have only brought back rejection slips, will be burned up.

as will copies of the Shopping News and Shopping Guide.

The occasion is the annual clean-up and paint-up week to be staged next month simultaneously by the three peninsula cities. One of the principal objections for cleaning up is the elimination of old rubbish, weeds and brush which are a constant fire menace to the city.

Because of the rank growth of grass and weeds resulting from this winter's rain, the fire hazard this summer will be increased. Consequently the local fire department is anxious to get the cooperation of every owner and resident in the village.

A conference on the scheduled clean-up campaign was held last week between Fire Chief Robert Leidig of Carmel, Fire Chief W. E. Parker of Monterey, and Roy M. Wright of Pacific Grove.

City Wins New Step In Stopping Free Dodgers

Another step toward eliminating house to house distribution of advertising dodgers in Carmel was gained last week.

Following the arrest and conviction of Guy Curtis, Monterey publisher of the Shopping News in the local police court, his advertising periodical was distributed through the mail instead of from door to door.

Curtis was arrested for violating an ordinance enacted by the council last year prohibiting the distribution of the paper, unless requested by each house occupant. He was found guilty and has appealed the verdict to the superior court. In the meantime, he has resorted to the mails for the distribution of his paper.

The Monterey Peninsula Shopping Guide and the advertising dodger of a peninsula department store were also distributed through the mail, instead of on the door steps.

When he was found guilty last week, Curtis was warned that if he violated the ordinance again, pending his appeal, he would be subjected to a heavy fine.

Carmel Contractor To Construct Pajaro Jail

Carmel may not have a city jail, but one of its prominent contractors is about to build one.

M. J. Murphy, was the low bidder for the construction of a new jail at Pajaro when bids were called by the board of supervisors. Award of the contract was delayed until April 21, pending completion of details.

Work on the jail will probably start in May and will be completed in a month's time. Murphy made a bid of $1600 to do the work.

Carmel Woman Dies After Long Illness

Funeral services were held last week for Mrs. Minnie Hugill, well known in Carmel, who for the last seven years was the housekeeper at Del Monte Lodge. Mrs. Hugill died at her Dolores street home last Monday.

She is survived by a sister, Miss

Annie Hugill, also of Carmel, and a brother, Edmond Hugill of Tulsa, Oklahoma. Services were held at Freeman's undertaking parlor with the Rev. W. V. Morgan of the First Baptist Church of New Monterey, officiating.

Tax Revision for School Levies Favored by Many Organizations

By O. W. Bardarson

Representatives from the California Farm Bureau Federation, California Teachers Association, California Real Estate Association, State Grange, Tax Equalization Association, State Supervisors Association, State Department of Education, Agricultural Legislative Committee and California Property Owners Division met at San Bernardino, February 18 last, in an attempt to arrive at a form of tax revision which would help transfer the costs of public education from real and personal property and place them upon a more equitable form of levy.

At a previous meeting the State Grange had agreed on the following:

(1) We will strenuously oppose any plan which will reduce the total amount of school funds now being received from the state and county.

(2) We are in favor of some plan which will relieve real estate of part of the burden of taxation.

(3) We favor the principle of equalization both of the county and of the state in the distribution of funds.

The representatives of the California Teachers Association stated that the cost of the public schools was not out of proportion to public expenditures in California. The total amount of public expenditures is $765, 000,000. Of this amount $150,000,000, or about 20 per cent is used for public schools. This includes all current expenditures and capital outlay. In addition to the $150,000,000, $19,000,000 per year will cover the costs of the State University and of the southern state teacher colleges and the state special schools for the deaf, blind, etc. This would bring the total to 22 per cent of all county and state apportionment.

The reasons for the increased cost of education were pointed out to be as follows:

(1) Increased length of school term.

(2) Enriched education opportunities to the children of the state consisting of: (a) better prepared teachers, (b) better equipment and buildings, (c) a curriculum to meet the needs of present-day life.

riculum to meet the needs of present-day life.

(3) Greater increased attendance. The labor-saving devices have eliminated the children as workers. The schools provide constructive activities. Consider the grave social problems which would arise if the children were not retained in school and were thrust upon society with nothing to do!

H. G. Wells has stated that "Civilization has always been a race between education and catastrophe." Education is the means by which civilization is achieved and transmitted to future generations.

The group gathered at San Bernardino recognized that the tax upon real estate is excessive and proposed that it be obligatory upon the state of California to furnish from state revenues $30 per child in average daily attendance in the elementary and secondary schools of the state as is provided at present.

In addition thereto the state will be required to furnish $40 per child in average daily attendance in elementary and $70 per child in average daily attendance in secondary schools.

The $10 additional amount was urged by the California Teachers Association representatives in order that amounts to be expended by the counties in the future may be as small as possible.

Under the present method of distribution the state and counties actually distribute at the present time, because of the mandatory matching requirements for counties, about $70 per child in elementary and $100 per child in high schools.

Standards are to be set up by the State Board of Education and upon these standards shall be based the apportionment law which will be presented at the next session of the legislature, should the amendment carry.

The action of the representatives at the San Bernardino meeting is one of the most forward steps ever taken in the financing of education in State of California.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Main were weekend guests at Pebble Beach of Mr. and Mrs. John Magee.

Two Carmel Couples Honored at Services

At least two Carmel couples have never faced a divorce court.

They are Judge and Mrs. Charles Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hitchcock, all four having fought life's battles together for more than 50 years. The two couples were among a large group who were honored at the First Christian church in Pacific Grove last Sunday at impressive golden wedding anniversary services.

Judge and Mrs. Clark were married in California in 1877. They have five children and six grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Hitchcock were married in California in 1880 and have three children and nine grandchildren.

Recital of Henri Deering Important Musical Event

By Hal Garrott

The little Denny-Watrous Gallery on Dolores street is fast becoming a musical shrine. More and more its influence is contributing to what I hope Carmel may some day become—a musical center of distinction, perhaps the cradle of a national American music.

It is difficult to conceive of great music being born in large cities, tainted as they are by the moronic tom-tom of saxophone jazz, and the straining to dazzle sensation-seeking audiences. In Carmel how different! Our audiences expect music—not sleight-of-hand performances on the piano. Those present include 90 per cent sincere lovers of the art a score of musical celebrities, and those who make the trip from San Francisco in order to hear music in an ideal setting. Attending the Deering recital were the Neah-Kah-Nie Quartet, Margaret Tilly, Noel Sullivan, Frederick Search, Frank Wickham, and prominent music patrons and producers too numerous to mention.

Naturally I was eager to hear a pianist who could attract such an audience, and, having heard him, am still more eager to hear him again. Henri Deering possesses a happy combination of those qualities which make for interpretive beauty and charm. Wholly free from affectation and exploitation of self, this pianist approaches his art in the reverent spirit of the great Cesar Franck, whose Prelude, Choral and Fugue proved the high spot of Saturday's recital.

Henri Deering's tone is never dry, always singing and well pedaled. Around each number he succeeds in weaving a mood. Especially is he successful in the lyric and reflective. His is the type of playing one longs for while lolling under a tree amid the music of birds and the distant rumble of the sea. As some one said of Spenser's Faerie Queene, "it should be heard under a tree beside a babbling brook."

Mr. Deering's touch has a satisfying firmness and depth. Never have I heard Debussy's Reflections in the Water more satisfyingly performed. So many toss a pebble into the water, destroying the delicate reflections. Tenderly and in liquid tones Henri Deering reveals the fleeting vision. Even his masterful climax failed to ripple the pool. How exquisitely he played Poulenc's Adagietto! Here, indeed, is a craftsman and poet who charms us with the stuff that dreams are made of. No wonder recalls and encores followed one another—no wonder I want to hear him play again.

Many Books Circulated

Last Month at Library

More than 7387 books were loaned out during the month of March by the Carmel library, according to the monthly statistical information given out by Hortense Berry, the librarian. This total shows that 1552 more books were issued last month than during the corresponding period last year.

There is now a total of 1951 registered borrowers at the library, 41 new ones having obtained cards in March. According to Miss Berry, a large number of non-fiction and fiction books have been received for circulation during April.

Grove by Dr. F. W. Haasis

Work of the Carmel Carnegie laboratory in the study of the growth of trees and plant life was outlined to the Neighbors club of Pacific Grove last week by Dr. Ferdinand W. Haasis of Carmel.

Dr. Haasis, who is identified with the Carnegie laboratory, explained the use of the instruments installed in Carmel for the measurement of trees. Considerable knowledge as to the growth of trees has now become available because of the measurement tests that have been conducted at the laboratory, Dr. Haasis said.

Rodeo at San Clemente

Ranch Next Sunday

The old west will live again at the San Clemente ranch in the Carmel Valley on Sunday, April 17. Cowboys from the Salinas and Carmel valleys are oiling up their saddles and chaps in preparation for the big rodeo and Spanish barbecue to be held there then.

All the tricks which go to make up a successful rodeo and roundup will be in evidence as the boys climb aboard and prepare to do their stuff. Proceedings will get under way at twelve noon when a huge barbecue of real old Spanish flavor and dimensions is dished up to the crowd. Everyone is invited to attend. There will be a nominal admission charge for the barbecue and show.

Henry Stowell, manager of San Clemente ranch, is in charge of the affair and reports interest keen in the outing. Stowell, an old-

Life Preservers, Emergency Phone To be Installed on Beach at Once

Three life preservers, a life boat and a telephone, all to be used for emergency purposes will probably be placed on Carmel beach before the summer season is underway.

This was made certain today by Mayor Herbert Heron, who is strongly behind the movement to safeguard the beach against possible drownings during the summer season.

The telephone, which can also be used by the public, is to be installed by the telephone company within the next two weeks. It will be placed at a strategic location on the beach. In the event that there is an accident on the beach or a near drowning, the telephone can be used to summon a physician or the rescue squad of the fire department. For such emergencies, it will not be necessary to obtain a connection.

Prices on life preservers and a life boat are now being obtained by the council. The life preservers will be purchased as soon as possible while the matter of a boat depends on its cost.

The life preservers are to be placed, one on the north end of the beach, another near the foot of Ocean avenue, and the third on the south end. They will be placed on white poles with a long life-line attached to them.

Mayor Heron will also ask the council at its next meeting about the matter of appointing a guard to patrol the beach during the summer months. At the present time, the city employs a special officer who watches the beach and has charge of cleaning it. For a few additional dollars, the full time services of the officer to guard the beach could be obtained, Heron said.

"There is no time to be lost toward safe-guarding the beach," Mayor Heron said today. "We have been fortunate that no drownings have occurred, but we cannot always depend on our good luck. It behooves us to take every precaution necessary to protect the beach."

It was also indicated that several signs, carrying the wording "swimmers use surf at their own risk" might be placed on the beach. According to City Attorney Argyll Campbell, such signs would protect the city against any damage suits that might arise out of drownings or accidents.

Fire Fighters Ready

For Summer Work

Arthur Story has returned from the annual Guard Meeting of the Santa Barbara National Forest.

Besides special conferences of Supervisors and District Rangers, three days of intensive training were given the fifty or more Forest Guards and Lookout Men who protect the Forest during the trying days of the Fire Season just about to commence. New men were taught their duties and how to perform them. Old-timers were given practice in new tools and appliances for fighting their ancient enemy, the fire that ruins watersheds, stands of timber, feeding grounds of deer, cattle and sheep, summer playgrounds of the people, and destroy that wild life of beasts, birds and flowers that give delight to thousands.

Ways of preventing fires were planned; outlines were made for the strategy and tactics to be used in the subjection of those fires that, despite all precautions, will break loose and ravage the forest areas.

Supervisor S. A. Nash-Boulden, Assistant Supervisor W. T. Murphy and Ranger Virgil De Lapp of the Monterey Division were foremost as instructors, advisors and leaders of discussion. One lesson the boys learned very thoroughly. This season, as never before, fires must be put out as quickly as possible, kept just as small as can be. Putting out fires costs money—the peoples' money. This year, as never before, the peoples' money must be protected.

Community Church

Humane Sunday will be observed at Carmel Community Church on Sunday next, a special service devoted to that subject will be the order of the day at 11:00 a.m. Mr. Gordon Knowles of Pacific Grove will be soloist. This church of the people invites all to worship and assures the stranger of freedom and broadness of thought and the spirit of friendship. The order of worship is one of dignity without slavishness to form, stressing symbolic beauty with an ennobling background of evangelism. Young peoples' service in the evening at 7:45. Subject: "A Sensible Approach to Religion." Hearty singing with musical items.

Stray Sheets of Manuscript

Samuel G. Blythe, Reporter
By Lee Shippey in Los Angeles Times

Samuel George Blythe is the foremost typical newspaper man of the era now beginning to pass. He carried papers as a small boy. He worked at the case in his father's print shop when he had to stand on a box to reach the type. He quit school in his teens in order to get educated. He "barnstormed" all over the country. He got down to the point at which he had to earn his meals as a "barker" in front of a restaurant. He knew his country, north, south, east and west, before he became a staff writer on the Saturday Evening Post and a keen clear sighted observer of the American scene.

And then, of course, he made his home in California.

Blythe's hair is white, at the age of 64, and a little thin in front. He is robust and solid, a little plump not fat. He has quizzical, laughing eyes which now and then narrow to a searching expression. He is not nervous, but so full of energy that he cannot sit still. We visited him for nearly two hours and most of the time he was on his feet, pacing about the room as he talked and pulling steadily on a capacious pipe.

"My father was a country editor in Geneseo, N. Y.," he said. "There isn't anything about a print shop which I can't do. At 17 I went to Rochester as a reporter—the lowliest and measliest run on the paper. At 18 I was trying to edit a country paper in Adrian, Mich. It was the poorest paper ever published. Emboldened by that success, I drifted to Pittsburgh, where I got a job as a copyholder. A paper was starting in Wheeling, W. Va., and I got the job of editor. Jefferson Davis had just died and I got that job for being able to write an editorial about him which would satisfy the Northern and Southern sympathizers in Wheeling. I drifted to Galveston next and then to the St. Louis Globe Democrat. When I was fired there, I walked into the office of a ticket scalper, laid down my money and asked for a ticket as far as it would take me. It took me to Ogden, Utah. I would have got to the Pacific Coast twenty-five years earlier if I could, but lack of funds stopped me in Ogden. There wasn't any sort of job open there, so I had to beat a dishpan in front of a restaurant and exert a pair of leather lungs to urge all hearers to come in and get the biggest meal in town for two bits. That lasted until a big-hearted conductor, who ate there every time his train rolled in, generously gave me some of the company's transportation. He took me back eastward with him and at the end of his run passed me along to another conductor with a few well-chosen words."

The young adventurer hadn't reached the Coast, but he hadn't missed anything as far as he'd gone. He worked on papers in Rochester and Buffalo, married Miss Carolyn Hamilton Oakes of Rochester when he was 20 and settled down to a life of constant change. He wrote an article for Cosmopolitan Magazine which so impressed John Brisben Walker, then its owner, that he was made managing editor. A year later he went to Washington as chief correspondent for the New York World. There he knew and saw through the great and near-great, gained understanding of all the moving forces of America. During his seven years there he became king of the correspondents, chairman of their standing committee, president of the Gridiron Club, the man about whom anecdotes were told—and to whom they were told. Then he went to the Saturday Evening Post in 1907—and has been a staff writer for that publication ever since.

Blythe is recognized as a foremost authority on American politics and the men who make it. He is here now expediting on the political angles of a picture that M. G. M. is making, showing just how they act in a Senate committee room or at a political convention. Yet politics has occupied only a fraction of his energies. He has been a cattle rancher in Montana, an oil man in Southern California, a humorist, a romanticist, a travelogist. For sixteen years he has lived at Pebble Beach, but has spent a great deal of his time in transit.

"There hasn't been a big show anywhere in the last forty years which I have missed," he said. "I've seen all the wars, I've sat in on most of the epochal things. I've known every big figure in American life in my time. I've written all sorts of things besides politics, including sixteen books. But I'm still just trying to be a good reporter. The newspaper game is the game where I got it all. In all the experiences of life I've seen the story. There's no fun in going to Europe to Asia if you can't get the story—if you can't see the human interest, understand what it's all about. There's no fun in having a million dollars if you can't see the story. Life is just boredom for those who can't get the story. All the scenarists and novelists and world planners who amount to anything are just good reporters—they see the story and bring out its human interest when they give it to us. Don't call me 'author' if you want to compliment me. Just call me a good reporter."

Announcement

The cleaners of the Monterey Peninsula have agreed that for the good of the industry and the public it is necessary at this time to establish a uniform price on cleaning. Owing to unsettled conditions throughout the country and the drastic price reductions which have taken place in many communities we find it necessary to establish prices based on a uniform satisfactory service on which the industry can make a fair return.

The following list is based on a workmanlike job, with the use of up-to-date equipment and high grade materials.

National Weekly Tells of Jeffers' Home Life

Most local Californians reciprocate his attitude. The most notable exception was California's poet, the late George Sterling, who doffed his poetical crown to Poet Jeffers, wrote a hero-worshipping study of him. In spite of this he remains to most Californians more of a cloudy stranger gone native than a sunny native son.

Nest. Poet Jeffers' birthplace was Pittsburgh, in 1887. From North Ireland had come his paternal grandfather. His father, an LL.D. learned in Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Arabic, had married an orphan 23 years his junior. John Robinson Jeffers was the first fruit; the second, Hamilton Jeffers, now engaged in astronomical work at Lick Observatory, came seven years later.

John Robinson, at 5, toured Europe with his parents, under his father's tutelage. From 12 to 15 he went to school at Vevey, Lausanne, Geneva, Zurich, Leipzig. At 16 he entered the University of Western Pennsylvania, but when his family moved to Pasadena he switched to Occidental College, Los Angeles, took his bachelor degree. He first met Una Call whose second husband he was later to become, while he was a post-graduate student at the University of Southern California.

In 1907 he accompanied his family again to Europe, entered the University of Zurich, but soon left to study medicine at the University of Southern California. Thence he went to Seattle and, to get some outdoor work, entered the forestry department of the University of Washington. At 25 he received a legacy from an uncle. Independent, he went to live at Hermosa Beach, passed his time swimming and writing verse. In 1913 he married Una Call Kuster.

The Jeffers' intention to live in Europe was thwarted by the War. Looking for a place to live they came on the spot where Hawk Tower and Tor House now stand: "When the stagecoach topped the hill . . . and we looked down through pines and sea-fogs on Carmel Bay, it was evident that we had come without knowing it to our inevitable place."

WINGS. His wanderings now over, Poet Jeffers devoted himself to following his mind's rising, widening gyres. He had already written much poetry, published one book. At 14 he had won a Youth's Companion poetry prize. A conventional book of love-poems Flagons and Apples (1912), he followed four years later with Californians. In its most notable poem, "Invocation," he addressed the westward-shining evening star that had led his ancestors out of Asia, across Europe, the Atlantic, America, to leave him, a solitary poet, stranded on *the verge extreme, and shoal

Of sand that ends the west.*

Balked by the Pacific Ocean, Poet Jeffers, unless he were to retrace his father's steps, had only three directions left to go: down, up, in. At different times he has taken all three.

Mrs. William Hammond Gibbons has come down from San Francisco to build a home on Carmelo near 10th.

Mrs. Mary Dummage, who has been staying in San Jose for the past four months, to her Carmel home.

The Nineteenth Hole

Sport of any kind has always produced an admirable spirit of democracy. King James II, when he was Duke of York, residing in Edinburgh, was challenged by two English noblemen to play a golf match for a very large stake, along with any Scotch ally he might select.

As his partner, the Duke chose a shoemaker named John Patterson, and the two won easily. Half of the large stake was given the shoemaker, who built himself a fine house in Edinburgh, which still stands at 77 Canangate, and is called "Golfer's Land."

Carmel is wonderfully situated for golf. There are few, if any, localities where there are four eighteen-hole courses within fifteen minutes drive, which is Carmel's situation.

For variety, we can go a little further afield, and travel a few miles up Carmel valley, to a sporty nine-hole course at Robles del Rio.

There one is among rolling hills, with fine old oaks clustered or dotted around. The only difficulty is in keeping an eye on the ball instead of on the inspiring panoramas of hills and valley that unfold from the knolls reached in one's peregrinations.

We were interested to learn the other day that the open championship of golf was started in 1860 by the Prestwick Club giving a belt to be played for annually, under the condition that it became the property of anyone who won it three times in succession.

The belt was acquired finally by Tom Morris, Jr., who won the championship four consecutive times, commencing in 1867.

What a fizzle miniature golf was, and rightly so, as any devotee of the real game will tell you. The word "golf" should never have been attached to such a futile game. However we give thanks that miniature golf is quite dead and buried, and that only a few monuments in the shape of pasteboard heads of crocodiles and lions, peering up through tangled weeds, remind us of the short-lived craze.

We are telling the following story to show how golf can break down the barriers of aloofness. There were two dour old Scotchmen who played 17 holes of golf without uttering a single word.

Tied on the 17th, they reached the 18th green where Sandy placed his ball in a direct line between Jock's ball and the hole.

"Stymie," muttered Jock, and Sandy, whiskers bristling, rumbled, "Chatterbox!"

One Correspondent Has His Troubles with Spring Flowers

One thing about spring fever that is worse than some things about hay fever, is that spring fever comes in the spring. Just now when the roses bloom and the purple stocks beautify the base of the lilac tree, the grass also pops up. We can't bear the thought of lifting a hoe, so we just sit sadly thinking how sadly we sit.

A strange thing about bulb flowers, they don't know duty. They come up in the path. Which makes one more duty to shirk. In fact, the path looks heavier with garden than the garden does. We have decided that the easiest thing to do is to print a sign, "Keep off The Path," and let it go at that.

Easter is gone, and it has left Miss X sadder but wiser. She made a little fenced-in plot of wild flowers, and deposited her two pet rabbits, Check and Doublecheck, therein. It made a nice Easter picture. But the two decorative bunnies greedily ate all the wild flowers and green things within reach. And as they were very young animals, they were very tender internally. They began to look like two furry bowling balls. In fact they looked more and more like the great ship Akron, until they were too big and too lifeless to be much good any more, and they had to be thrown away.

In a certain cottage lives a certain young bachelor. And, four days ago, the young bachelor got up in the morning and found a bowl of pancake dough on his doorstep. Very well, then. Nothing extraordinary about it, seeing that it happened in Carmel. But we hasten to add with a finger bent against our brow, that on the next morning the young man found seven fresh eggs, on the same doorstep.

Now the young man was puzzled. There was a rumor out that somebody leaves pancake dough to order, all mixed and ready for the hungry riser to cook. But if that had been left by error, it was hardly possible that the ranch eggs had also been, so to speak, mislaid.

On morning number three, nothing was found. So that night found young man calmly reading, or, we had better say, deeply studying, the scientific maze of Spengler. Suddenly a loud clear voice said, like quick breath, "Who?"

The young man raised his head. "Alright," he said, "then woof."

"Whoof," came the answer, "I'm a boogy man."

So the young man looked out, with every natural reason in the world to see something this time. And he saw—nothing.

Whereupon, we swallow after thoroughly masticating, with no apologies, our upper plate.

In a recent Saturday Evening Post there was an article by Frank Condon about golfers. We don't know a caddie from a birdie, but if anybody wants a bulldog putter, "Mr. H. L. Wilson once threw a bulldog putter seventy-five yards out into the Pacific Ocean from the velvet green of Pebble Beach, and it is still in the ocean."

Also Mr. Condon writes, "After moving to California to make his home, Gene Byrnes became dissatisfied with the Pacific golf courses and moved back to New York." "Ralph Block wrote a novel during the past year and remained steadfastly away from the golf courses of California the entire time." "Joseph Hergesheimer once shot the Pebble Beach course in 110." "Tom McNamara, the cartoonist, became famous in California as the only human being who could and did laugh whenever he missed a putt." "Frank Sheridan acts in Hollywood, plays baseball in Carmel and once played a complete round with Sam Blythe to prove that a ball player might not like golf." "Percy Marmount tried California for a while and became so dissatisfied with its golf courses that he returned to England." "Asked if he played, James Dunn replied, 'A little, but I haven't played since I've been to California.'" "If there is any reason why George Abbott would like to live in sunny California, it is because the courses seem easier out there." All of which proves something or something.

The jobless males can sleep on benches, But what about the workless wenches?

All of which reminds us of that snappy old quotation by Burns, "Gars auld claes look amais as weel's the new." Which certainly leaves no doubt about it.

The Devil Walks

By Herbert Cerwin

Carmel has always prided itself on the fact that none of the cottages and homes have street numbers. Since the first artist hung his smock in the village, it has been the custom to direct strangers by the color of the houses, the number of trees passed and usually the type of fence nearby.

Finding a house in Carmel often has necessitated the use of a compass, rough diagrams and sufficient gasoline to last for several hours. Probably this feature has had something to do with bringing many explorers as visitors to Carmel.

Oddly enough, however, there are street numbers in Carmel and they are located on more than two dozen homes in one particular residential section. One cottage on Casonava street has had a street number on its front porch long before any of the present pioneers arrived in the village by the way of the Salinas-Monterey road. (It was then a road).

Familiar sights of the eminent elite of the village during the course of the last seven days:

... Jeffers hiding out in his tower as dashing co-eds arrive to have him pen his name on his latest book.

... Mayor Herbert Heron eating peanuts.

... John B. Jordan returning from a hotelman's convention.

... Arthur Hill Gilbert, the artist, coming over from his home in Monterey to get his mail at the Carmel postoffice.

Unfamiliar sights of the equally eminent elite of the village:

... Lincoln Steffens standing on a Salinas street corner ... a Carmel resident passes in an automobile and inquires of the distinguished journalist if he has moved to Salinas. The dignified Mr. Steffens replied with the well know five-finger proboscis salute.

... City Clerk Saidee Van Brower and Mrs. Jessamine Rockwell discussing the possibility of a competition tennis match between them and the members of the Carmel business association.

It is difficult to realize that "Oh, Sailor, Behave," a much heralded moving picture was taken from the sophisticated comedy, "See Naples and Die," which played in Carmel last year. The picture dealt with the adventures of two sailors on shore leave in Italy, although the original play contained no sailors at all ... but the director was once a captain of the Egyptian navy ... which should be of some explanation. Perhaps if the efficient Monterey peninsula moving picture association persuaded a Hollywood studio to make a picture on the Carmel beach, it might develop into a thrilling drama with the scene depicting an Arabian desert.

And then there's the letter that came in this week from Boston, inquiring for further information on the long defunct Carmel nudist's colony.

Superior Recordings

By T. Harold Grimshaw

My readers will recall a recent broadcast of the historic "Ceremony of the Keys" from the Tower of London. This ceremony occurs at sunset and includes the locking-up of the Crown jewels. The tramp of echoing feet under forbidding archways, the clink of arms, the muffled closing and bolting of gates; then the challenge, "Who goes there?"—"The Keys"—"Whose keys?"—King George's Keys—all this and more is impressed on a twelve inch disc which was recorded by "His Master's Voice" (Victor's English affiliation) at the time of the broadcast. A most unique phonograph record and an historical document of considerable value. The above can only be obtained as an importation and the number is H.M.V. C-2358. Admirable recording.

The music of Johann Sebastian Bach has an appeal all its own and often satisfies the deeps of man's hidden yearning for beauty and spiritual food. Victor 7275 presents Elizabeth Schumann in two excerpts "St. Matthew's Passion" and "Cantata No 159." The accompaniment is orchestral with flute and oboe obligatos. Both have a deeply religious quality and will appeal most to those devoted to the music of the great Cantor of Leipzig.

Jack Dent has returned to his home in San Francisco from a weeks' visit with his sister, Mrs. Floyd Adams of Torres street.

Why is a Weekly?

Taking it by and large, "Why is a Weekly?"

Lend me your ear a minute or two and I'll tell you: In the first place, a weekly paper goes into the home and stays there for the whole week—that's one reason why it's called a weekly—while the daily goes out when the day is over, sometimes before, and that is probably why it's called a daily. The weekly is read by at least five to twelve people, and the daily by about half that number.

The influence of the serious weekly is far greater upon the thoughtful mind than the paper which is skimmed through and thrown aside. You never find weeklies cluttering up the floor or left on the seats of street cars. The subjects of a weekly paper of distinction are chosen carefully and have an intimate bearing on life—that is, the current political trend, literature, drama, and those things that have been tested and proved to help one find his way more easily about this world we live in.

That is, by and large, the mission of the weekly newspaper and in fulfilling that mission it is of fundamental value in the homes of the community where it is published. —Town Crier.

Three Carmel Youths Stranded on Bay When Squall Overturns Craft

Three prominent Carmel youths narrowly escaped losing their lives last Saturday when the boat they were sailing in overturned on Monterey bay leaving them stranded several miles from shore.

The three youths, John Sayers, 19, Andrew Walls, 19 and Alfred Durney, 18, managed to cling to the sides of the overturned boat, paddling it along until they reached a deserted fishing schooner. There they climbed aboard and waited to be rescued.

Durney was nearly unconscious from exposure and exhaustion. The three started out Saturday afternoon on a short pleasure trip from the municipal wharf. When they were returning at about 6:30 o'clock in the evening, a terrific squall struck the boat, overturning it. All three were thrown into the water and swam for some time before they were able to cling to the sides of the overturned boat. Then they headed for the fishing schooner, anchored more than half a mile away from where the accident occurred.

From 6:30 until 9:15 o'clock, the three remained stranded on the schooner. It was not until then that a fishing craft, manned by G. Cuteno, sighted the three and took them aboard the boat. He headed for Monterey, where they were taken to the hospital for medical treatment.

Durney was in a serious condition from the effects of exposure and exhaustion, but recovered sufficiently to leave the hospital several hours later. Walls and Sayers were none the worse for the experience.

But for the fact that all three were good swimmers, there would have been little chance of their being rescued alive. During the first hours they were on the bay, they were tossed back and forth against the boat by strong waves. Only by constant swimming did they keep themselves from being carried out to sea.

According to Sayers, who is the son of C. M. Sayers, Carmel wood carver, he and his two companions had given up practically all hope of being rescued, when they were sighted by the fishing schooner. He said that another fifteen minutes of waiting and they would have been unable to hang on any longer. He explained that they were too far from shore to attempt to swim back with any assurance of safety.

Christian Science Churches

"Doctrine of Atonement" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon Sunday, April 17, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon will include the following from the Bible: "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new. And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation" (II Cor. 5:17, 18).

The Lesson-Sermon also will include the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Atonement is the exemplification of man's unity with God, whereby man reflects divine Truth, Life, and Love. The atonement of Christ reconciles man to God, not God to man; for the divine Principle of Christ is God, and how can God propitiate Himself? Christ is Truth, which reaches no higher than itself. The fountain can rise no higher than its source" (p. 18).

Carmel Burglar Is Sent to San Quentin

Don Lawrence, recently of Carmel, has added to the population at San Quentin penitentiary with his presence.

Lawrence plead guilty last week in the superior court at Salinas of having broken into Imelman's sport shop in Carmel and having escaped with $500 worth of loot. He asked for probation which was denied and he was sentenced to from one to five years at San Quentin.

Jack Shores, his companion in the burglary, plead not guilty and demanded a jury trial. His case has been set for May 6. Shores claims he was in Monterey at the time of the burglary.

VIVE LE ROI!

Optimistically, Carmel welcomes a change in its municipal administration, and greets enthusiastically the two new councilmen who are to be the hope of the next four years. Just that many years ago, Jessamine Rockwell and Ross Bonham were so welcomed in an election that protested the planning of Carmel's future as projected by Charles Henry Cheney. Monday, in protest of another city planning project, the administration ticket was defeated.

Councilman-elect John C. Catlin, the probable next mayor of Carmel, said recently, "If my observation of ten years has not led me into error, the people of Carmel want nothing quite so much as to be left alone and in peace." Election results would seem to prove that statement. Going a step further, Carmel doesn't even want plans made for its future.

Which has in it, we must agree, a big seed of hope. Fear of the town's improvement by surfaced streets and advancements toward modernism have resulted in two complete turn-overs in the council in the last four years. Certainly this is indication enough that the people want no such improvements, nor do they want plans made now for improvements in the future.

The PINE CONE has believed that plans should be made now in order to prevent a future Carmel, less amenable to things aesthetic, from building in conventional lines. The PINE CONE has feared the future too much, has had not enough confidence in the people who make up, and who come here to make up the town's electorate. Four years ago we were insistent that a plan must be established then, or our streets would be concreted in straight lines, curb to curb. Today, the streets are in practically the same untouched state, and by a majority vote, the people have said "leave them untouched, and trust the future people of Carmel to hold them safe and unspoiled."

This, in our belief, is the great lesson of Monday's election, and in it we feel a new confidence in the artistic growth of the village. We are not going to dread the changes of policy that new blood brings to an administrative body. Both John C. Catlin and Robert E. Norton have lived many years in Carmel, and have absorbed the atmosphere of the village. They are not for making it a big town, or even a city. They are both on record for economy of government, for no special assessments or increase in taxation, and will work for the best interests of Carmel.

In a way, the election may be considered a distinct victory for the old-timers, and for the believers in a village untouched by the modern trend of commercialism. John C. Catlin is a lawyer turned blacksmith, the builder of artistic hand-wrought iron things, a man who has given up city life and the contacts of an extensive law practice for simplicity and the village atmosphere. Robert Norton, a real estate man, has lived practically his entire life here, and he knows the value of the Carmel idea. With Herbert Heron, Clara B. Kellogg and John B. Jordan on the council with them, Carmel is pretty safe to carry-on as a village of distinction.

SARGASSO SEA

From leagues of seaweed-spinning calm
(Dun ocean-acres bland as balm)
A saga bloomed to overleap
The weirdest wonders of the deep.

From currents coiling a wide arm
Round waters drowsy as a farm,
A story seeped of ogreish tides
Seducing sails, like lost white brides,

Into a ghostly oasis,
A port for prowls that would not pass
Awaiting wharves, yet never wed
Oblivion in ocean's bed.

There ships from all the shores of earth,
Beaked prowlers out of fiord and firth,
Winged galleons blown from the south,
Were huddled like strange herds in drouth.

There, drawn by slyly sucking streams,
Swart-oomed bows nudged rotting beams,
And miles of masts thrust splintered spines
Thru dull skies like denuded pines.

There, snared in the gigantic ebb
Of waves that wove a scummy web,
Lay gorgeous cargoes, crumbled news
And skeletal, forgotten crews—

Locked in a limbo that could free
Them only from a ghouliah sea
When fancy's mariners had tracked
Their fate in sturdy fleets of fact.

INLANDER

They spoke of many a sundry thing,
Of corn, of flocks, of gales,
Of harvest yields, of drouth, of rain,
He dreamed of wind-borne sails.

He could not mow a single swath,
Or break the earth with plow,
But that he saw a silver way
Made by a gleaming prow.

In every wind that stirred the wheat
He heard the grey gulls cry,
The only ships he ever knew
Were cloud ships in the sky.

He died—tall grass above him blows,
And white tipped daisies sway
In little waves, like those at sea
Upon a summer day.

Genevieve Frazer

at least, let's give them a hearty cheer for four years' labor honestly done in Carmel's service. At best, the job of a councilman in Carmel is a thankless one. Only kicks may be hoped for by the incumbents. There is no pay, even in gratitude. We pitchfork them out at the end of their terms, and don't care much whether or not the tines pierce the flesh.

The PINE CONE did not support either Mrs. Rockwell or Mr. Bonham for the council four years ago. Between that day of their election until now, our admiration for them has grown steadily with the passing of time. Their thought has been for Carmel, and unselfishly they have worked for Carmel, giving hours of each day to the city's affairs. They have used care and judgment in their official acts. They have been true friends of the village.

So we take off our hat to councilwoman and councilman, say our "Well done," and express our thanks. We join with hundreds of other Carmelites in a cheer for Jessamine Rockwell and Ross Bonham, who have ably carried on.

SAY IT WITH PLANTS

A very handsome addition to the employment fund was made possible by the Carmel Woman's Club garden section, who engineered a plant sale at the Sunset School grounds last Saturday, and netted a hundred dollars for the good work. Each year, this department of the women's organization has made a distinct contribution to the community happiness through either a flower show, a garden contest, or some similar undertaking.

Always they have been successful, and have merited the high praise that resulted. This spring's affair, less spectacular than some of the others, but planned to meet a particular condition of need, must not be slighted because of its lack of display. A great amount of hard work went to the planning and carrying through of the sale. A large number of women labored to make it the success that it was. To the Carmel Woman's Club garden section many thanks are due from the people of the town.

KEEP THE BEACH INVIOLEATE

The prompt uprising of citizens to protect the sand dunes against encroachments of any kind, brought a speedy reversal of the city council's action in permitting tennis courts on the city property there, and the danger is averted. The thin edge of the wedge which would open our water front to the despoilers was hard to see, and many people who favored the movement of a public tennis court did not realize that it would undoubtedly lead to the common fate of beaches in tourist towns. From tennis courts, by the way of shower-baths, a bath house, with concessions, to hurdy-gurdies and hot-dogs, is a natural progression.

This is the second time within a few years that people having fine ideals have attempted to utilize the Carmel beach for public purposes. The community bath house, nurtured in the Woman's Club, went through its preliminary stages before the organization that gave it birth discovered how dangerous it might prove, and strangled it. Such movements, imbued with the finest of intentions, are apt to spring up at any time, and are the more dangerous because they appear so innocent.

There are now in Carmel a certain few who can only see our sand dunes and beach as an aid to business, and want them enlivened by the attractions of a resort town. They know that the first break in the walls of Carmel convention must be seemingly innocuous. If tennis courts are allowed there, they can argue more readily for a bath house. With a bath house, they can muscle in with concessions. Once through the barriers, they will soon have all they desire there, and Carmel's beach will be just one more of the board-walks and Pikes that mar the Pacific Coast.

How easy it is to slip the first narrow wedge in, this tennis court project shows. The employment commission saw in it only the opportunity to give added work to the needy. The club women viewed it as a children's playground project. Without the opportunity for discussion, or that more careful second thought which might have showed the dangers, it came before the council and was acted upon with startling suddenness. Before most people realized that the barriers had been broached, they were down in ruins. Actual work was begun, and trees that had taken years to grow, were dropped and mutilated.

There must be some way to protect our beach and sand dunes from invasion, or at least make invasion possible only after study, discussion and a vote of the residents of Carmel. It should not be so that the council, simply by passing a motion or resolution, could allow tennis courts or a bath house, or anything of permanent construction to be placed on the city-owned properties of our water front. Let the new council investigate the matter, and find a legal means of safeguarding the beach to the people.

defeated for the nomination by a last minute combination of Estee and Bidwell.

Bidwell, who was a wine grower, mistook the sentiment of his constituents, when, after nomination, he pulled up all his grape vines and went out of the business. His democrat opponent, Irvin of Siskiyou, a cattleman, defeated him that fall.

Again, in 1883, John Catlin came to Monterey, and lived for a year with Dr. Stewart, while his eyes were being given attention. In 1901, Catlin lived a winter in Pacific Grove. Always, from a boy, he was interested in Carmel and its wondrous beach, and made frequent excursions over the hill.

Thirty-five years ago this summer, I walked into an office in Sacramento and asked a young man in the outer room if Judge A. P. Catlin was in.

"What do you want to see Dad about?" inquired the young man, and I sat down and told John C. Catlin my business. I saw him frequently that summer during my stay in the capital, and we became friendly. Then I lost all began fashioning raw iron into forms of beauty, became the village blacksmith.

Men in public office frequently announce that they are going into retirement and then, after they have rested for a few months, worked in their garden read some books, they plunge into bigger undertakings than they have ever attempted before. Judge Jackson H. Ralston, who frequently visits in Carmel and who has dozens of friends here, is no exception.

For 46 years he practiced law and became one of the most celebrated attorneys on political problems. For some time he had been looking around for the excuse of ill health to retire. It never came. Five years ago he took things into his own hands, closed his office in Washington, D. C., and came to settle down in Santa Clara valley.

He took life easy for a month; he loafed around the house, read the books which he always wanted to, but never had the chance; then he became tired of not doing anything and so he commenced work on a book of international law and procedure which was recently published. That done, he is now writing a second volume and making preparations for a third. Is he retired? Certainly not. He is more active than he ever was although he is now 75 years old.

Judge Ralston was born into a family of lawyers. His father served in the Illinois legislature with Lincoln and Douglas. Back in 1902, he was the American agent and counsel in the case against Mexico regarding the pious fund of California for the benefit of the California missions. Over 1,500,000 Mexican pesos were demanded. This was the first dispute submitted to the permanent court of arbitration at the Hague under the Hague peace convention. Ralston's reputation was made when he came out victorious.

In Washington for 25 years he was the attorney for the American Federation of Labor and personal attorney for Samuel Gompers, the president.

Of significant interest to Carmel is the fact that Judge Ralston is to debate next Monday in Pacific Grove on the subject of single tax—an event which will be attended by many local friends. And, by the way, during his visit on the peninsula Judge Ralston is scheduled to spend several days in Carmel at the home of friends here.

Here's what Pop Warner of Stanford thinks of Gordon Campbell, told by Mark Kelly of the Los Angeles Examiner:

"Gordon Campbell, the Stanford football player, will be the greatest quarterback that the Indians have had since the days of Mike Murphy and 'Spud' Lewis," in the opinion of Pop Warner.

The Cardinal mentor told me that he will shift Campbell from left halfback to quarter as he wants an agile player, with a good football brain in that position, instead of a fullback type such as he has used in recent years.

Campbell, in addition to being a good ball carrier, is one of the smartest of football players. He makes a careful study of all opponents, can tell their weaknesses and knows how to take advantage of every situation.

With Warner planning to use the double spinner, his attack should be more versatile than ever with a fast man like Campbell in the quarterback berth.

People Talked About

The genteel art of dueling has not been forgotten with the passing of the years, this despite the fact that it is no longer part of a gentleman's curriculum. Once a slap on the cheek was an invitation to a death battle on any morning selected by the chivalrous combatants. Now, no one bothers about slaps.

On the face of it, one would think that civilized behavior has resulted in discarding such barbaric habits. On the other hand, it is quite probable that the cost of swords, engraved cards and the hiring of seconds had something to do with the lost popularity of dueling. After all, it was only gentlemen who participated in such customs, and gentlemen as a rule wear tailor-made suits with empty pockets.

All of which leads to the fact that Robert T. Adams, one of the leading duelists in the country and former Pacific coast champion in fencing, is a temporary visitor in Carmel this week. Adams is not only a champion himself, but he teaches others how to win medals. He is the official instructor in fencing at the University of California.

Fencing, according to Adams, has never lost its popularity, because in the first place it never had any. It is the only sport in America which seldom gets any attention in the newspapers and attracts but little interest among the majority of people.

No other sport, Adams admits, is as boring to witness as a fencing exhibition, unless the audience is familiar with the art of dueling. Yet the sport carries a halo of romance which, in all these years, has not disappeared.

The very word dueling sparkles with romance and chivalry. Yet it is one of the minor sports at the University of California, although Adams has 85 registered students at the present time. Fencing covers three types of swords, the foil, the saber, and the epee or dueling sword.

Of these three, the dueling sword is the most difficult to master. Adams points out that it takes at least seven years of constant practice to become proficient in handling a dueling sword. This is probably the reason, Adams says, why it interests only a small per cent of the people.

There is little danger in the exhibition combats that are now staged among the colleges. Nevertheless, Adams has had some narrow escapes and carries several scars, which a century ago might have represented an honor that was upheld on the field of battle.

And despite the fact that Adams is one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the art of fencing, he does not believe in using swords for settling disputes, love affairs and lost honors. His reason is that luck plays too big a part in an actual combat. An experienced swordsman, whose technique might be nearly perfect, can be mortally wounded by an inexperienced duelist who makes a luck thrust.

Thus, dueling has become but a sport to reveal action, grace and speed. It is now less dangerous than football or ping-pong.

Van Wyck Brooks' latest biography, "The Life of Emerson," published by E. P. Dutton and Co., New York, is receiving very complimentary comment from the reviewers. Says John Macy, in the New York Times Book Review, "This critical biographer is one of the wise young voices of our time, and in this book he speaks the best word that he has yet spoken, though surely not the last, in the essays on civilization which began with 'The Wine of the Puritans' and include the arousing 'America's Coming of Age.'"

Van Wyck Brooks, while instructor in English at Stanford University, came to Carmel where he married Eleanor Kenyon Stimson in 1911, and spent that and several subsequent summers here. His first book, "The Wine of the Puritans" had been published in 1909; his second, "The Malady of the Ideal," mostly written in Carmel, was published in 1913. In the first Forest Theater production of "Alice in Wonderland," He played the part of the Walrus. "The time has come," the Walrus said.

Just a year ago Thomas Vincent Cator passed away, the sudden death from heart disease a shock to the entire community, where he was intimately known and loved.

From Inchling, just published by Birchard, I quote the lyric written by Irene Alexander, and set to music by Tom Cator:

"Soft silver bells are calling,
They're calling me away
To lands of mystic beauty
Where purple fountains play;
To some far distant valley
Where lily buds unfold,
And deep down in their petals
I'll find my bright wings of gold."

John Catlin, councilman elect and probable next mayor of Carmel, has every right to consider himself a resident of the Monterey peninsula. It was in 1876, during the very famous Republican convention at Monterey, when John Bidwell, M. M. Estee and Judge A. P. Catlin, John's father, fought for the gubernatorial nomination, that John first came to the peninsula. Although a small boy at the time, he remembers well that exciting contest, where his father had a plurality of delegates during most of the time of the convention, and was only

THE VILLAGE NEWS-REEL

Clear warm weather on the Monterey Peninsula accounts in large measure, perhaps, for the number of interesting people to be found on the Del Monte and Pebble Beach golf courses these days. April and May are the prize months on the Peninsula to many. Mrs. Manfred Bransten and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bransten of San Francisco are among recent Del Monte arrivals. Mrs. Henry Drew Nichols and her daughter, Miss Ethel Nichols of Piedmont are also at Del Monte for a few days. Mrs. Frederick B. Henderson and Miss Julia Henderson of Berkeley are at the Del Monte Lodge for the weekend.

Fred G. Strong is the second of the local postoffice force to take his annual two weeks' vacation. Fred Myler returned to his duties last Monday.

Van Wyck Brooks, one-time Carmelite, author of "The Ordeal of Mark Twain" and "The Pilgrimage of Henry James," has recently finished the "Life of Emerson." Mr. and Mrs. Brooks with their two sons have made their home here for some time. Mrs.

Brooks is the daughter of Mrs. E. L. Simpson.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mackay of New York who, for the past fortnight, have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Magee at their Pebble Beach place, returned last night from a camping trip down the Carmel coast and in the Big Sur country. With them were the Misses Gertrude Conway and Bernice Black of New York who are making an extended visit at the Cypress Point Club.

Miss Cecily Cunha had a large party at the usual Saturday evening dinner dance in the Bali Room at Del Monte. Others noted at the affair were Dr. and Mrs. Paul Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. Byington Ford, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Veeder.

The Raincheck golf tournaments held every Saturday at the Cypress Point Club are finding increased favor with a large group of San Francisco and peninsula folk. Mrs. Byington Ford and Mr. Francis McComas captured honors in the most recent tourney.

Considerable entertaining is being done in honor of Mr. and Mrs. G. Clymer Brooke of Boston who are honeymooning at Hotel Del Monte. Following their Del Monte stay, the Brookes will continue to San Francisco and Tahiti.

Plans have been completed for the Spanish barbecue and rodeo to be held at San Clemente, Del Monte's dude ranch, on Sunday. Many of the Pebble Beach and Carmel Valley group will be present to cheer their favorite cowboys and a gala time is anticipated. Lovely San Clemente is but one hour by motor up the Carmel Valley from Hotel Del Monte.

Arrangements are fast going ahead for the Del Monte Kennel club show to be held on the hotel grounds on June 19th. Many San Francisco and peninsula folk are regular exhibitors at the Del Monte shows.

Highlands Inn guests over the week-end indicate that the tourist season is starting early this year, and they are coming from all directions. New York State leads in number, being represented by Mr. and Mrs. Wilkins and Mrs. Frank G. Hall of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Skelding of Rye and Miss Clara E. Massey of Watertown.

Other easterners are Ella Aurora Love, Aurora, Illinois; Mr. and Mrs. Laurence M. Keeler and son Marston W. Keeler of Whitinsville, Massachusetts; and Mr. and Mrs. Warren M. Crosby of Topeka, Kansas.

The north is represented by Mr. and Mrs. T. W. B. London of Vancouver, B.C., and Mrs. J. W. Greene of Seattle. The south by Jack Cooley of El Paso, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Stewart of San Diego; Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Walden of Santa Paula; Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Dunbar and Mr. and Mrs. Sobieski of Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. James Whittemore and Miss Margaret Whittemore, Mrs.

Clinton B. Hale and Miss E. P. Chamberlain, L. A. Hopkins and daughter, of Santa Barbara; and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Sage of Up-land.

Concert Organist Here

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Barnes of Evanston, Illinois, were visitors in Carmel this week. Mr. Barnes is on a concert tour, and recently dedicated the new Los Angeles First Congregational Church organ. He is the author of a book entitled The Contemporary American Organ, and is himself an organ builder. His wife, Edith McMillan Barnes, is a pianist of note and plays the piano part to the organ and piano numbers on her husband's programs. Both Mr. and Mrs. Barnes spoke enthusiastically of Carmel as a place to live and work. They much prefer it to Peterborough, the famous MacDowell colony on the East coast.

Wonder-Child Coming

Harry Cykman, 9-year-old wonder-child, who has set San Franciscans on fire with his violin playing, will give a recital in the Green Room of the Studio Theatre of the Golden Bough, on Monday at 4 p.m.

Master Cykman has played often with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, and already critics are comparing him with Yehudi Menuhin, and referring to him in terms of the highest praise. This child master-performer may be heard in Carmel for children, 25¢ and for adults, 50¢—thanks to the efforts of Carmel's gifted impresario, Marie Gordon.

Missionary Society to Hold Meeting April 29

The Missionary Society will hold its monthly meeting on Friday, April 29, instead of Wednesday, its regular day. There will be a talk by Mrs. E. Murray of Pacific Grove, well-known on the Peninsula as a speaker of insight and charm. Mrs. Murray has late information of the flooded district of China in the year 1887 and the present year when 200 missionaries are going to that country. The meeting will be at 2:30 p.m. in the Guild hall of the Community Church.

New Ford on Display At Carmel Garage

Complete details of the new V-8 cylinder Ford car for which orders can now be placed were made public here today by L. H. Levinson of the Carmel garage, local Ford dealer.

The new Ford is large, long, roomy, fast, powerful and alert. Its V-8 cylinder engine develops 65 horsepower and is capable of 75 miles per hour.

Fourteen body types of modern streamline design are offered by the Ford people. A four cylinder engine developing 50 horsepower also can be supplied with any of these new body types at a lower price.

Numerous mechanical advances are incorporated in the new car. These embrace a synchronized silent gear shift and silent second gear, rubber engine mountings, down-draft carburetor and carburetor silencer, automatic spark control, fuel pump and rear fuel tank. Other improvements include a newly-designed rear spring, new type shock absorbers, large four-wheel brakes. The chassis and running gear are cushioned by rubber insulators in the spring shackles and shock absorber links. The body is insulated from the frame by rubber pads.

The first day that the new Ford went on the floor at the Carmel garage, the interest of the people in this new car was shown by the fact that over 900 visited the showrooms, many signing up for demonstrations.

Former Carmel Girl Has Narrow Escape in Plane

Afton Lewis, remembered by old-time Carmelites as a pretty child in early Forest Theater children's plays, cousin of Louis Lewis who lives at 5th and San Carlos, is recovering from cuts and bruises, the result of an accident that nearly proved fatal at Mills Field, San Francisco, last Sunday. Miss Lewis' plane came hurtling to the ground when, in a solo flight, it collided with a passenger plane piloted by Paul Sammartino.

The plane crashed in view of hundreds of visitors to the airport, and it was at first believed that Miss Lewis was critically injured. However, she had escaped with minor injuries, and is now back at her home in San Francisco, convalescent. The passenger plane,

New Dress Shop With

in the opening performance of the Forest Theatre, and has been closely associated with dramatic affairs and social doings in Carmel ever since. She has a host of friends

Airplane Getting Bird's Eye View of Feminine Charms Draws Protest

Great sakes of nudism! It's happened.

No longer can the elite, feminine members of the village worship the sun in their own backyards.

Those rich rays of health that cure every ill of the body; that bring strength to weakened muscles and brown the skin you love to touch, can no longer be theirs for the asking . . . at least not unless some legal action is taken.

No matter how tall or how thick the walls around a backyard are constructed, milady's charms can not be kept from the eyes of the public. For an aeronautical firm with Salinas as the base is depending on the natural resources of the village to increase their business.

It all started several weeks ago when the wife of a prominent Carmel resident was basking in the sun in the privacy of her backyard. An airplane circled around the locality of her house for some ten minutes and then disappeared. Since that eventful day, the airplane returned for half a dozen visits until the good lady's suspicions were aroused and she was forced to discontinue her sun baths.

According to City Attorney Argyll Campbell, an injunction against the operator of the airplane could be obtained. But first complaint must be sworn out—an action which no lady would consent to do because of the subsequent publicity.

As a result, the Carmel feminists are all up in the air. Why have the sun if you cannot absorb its natural, health-giving rays?

It's a question that has the village all burned up.
